

China Seed Market To Hit $3.9 Billion!

Shandong Zhouyuan Seed and Nursery Co., Ltd (SZSN)
$0.28 UP 16.6%

China is the second largest seed market in the world. China's current market is $2.9 Billion annually and experts forecast it to hit $3.9 Billion in the next 2.5 years. SZSN is already expanding to keep ahead of the demand. Read the news, and watch for more Monday. Get on SZSN!

It might be a stretch to describe either the Minister or his Shadow as 'pretty'.

Another possible problem with balance is that it's not an easy task to put all points of view equally.

It's protection, and the potential for its demise a subject of constant interest.

And the style of lawn bowls played on this side of Crows Nest is totally different.

Another possible problem with balance is that it's not an easy task to put all p oints of view equally.

'Howard is sweating, no question,' opined Parliament cafe attendant Donna Worrall.

Foreign Minister Alexander Downer has spent the last week in crisis talks, attempting to overcome the Federal Government's lack of legal options.

Isn't that what this is?

Meanwhile other men in ties explain why work hours are longer, food more expensive, sleep more difficult to come by, children abandoned to child-care, houses too costly.

He may, privately, fantasise endlessly about the Shadow Workplace Relations Minister.

Then in the evening news comments from two or three politicians and maybe an expert are generally included in a story lasting up to two-and-a-half minutes.

Objectivity is an impossible aspiration for the newshound.

In sports as in politics, the aim is to win, and we can let the Fairfax papers worry about 'morals'.

'Ms Worrall said Mr Howard appeared to do 'remarkably well' in the test, being able to identify most coffee types with the exception of the four different types of latte on offer.

in short there's very little to balance.

'Ms Worrall said Mr Howard appeared to do 'remarkably well' in the test, being able to identify most coffee types with the exception of the four different types of latte on offer.

The belief that one can briefly set aside one's axioms and bias in order to pen an objective factual account of some event or another is hopelessly naive.

But paradoxically it remains important to make the attempt - despite awareness that the attempt is doomed to failure.

The State has been permeable at certain times to certain political agendas which have resulted in genuinely democratic reforms.

Hostilities planned by the United States, and in which Australia will likely participate, have not yet begun.

Now, though, in an unprecedented coup, the Irony Party of Australia has obtained pictures of alien worlds beyond even the wildest dreams of the US-based Space Agency.

Some appeared to be more susceptible to his influence, and quickly succumbed.

Now, though, in an unprecedented coup, the Irony Party of Australia has obtained pictures of alien worlds beyond even the wildest dreams of the US-based Space Agency.

For Hockey, Gillard may be a swan, a delectable morsel, a daunting, unattainable, delicious and tantalising femme fatale.

Joe Hockey may personally have a penchant, a crush, a 'thing' for Julia.

Then in the evening news comments from two or three politicians and maybe an expert are generally included in a story lasting up to two-and-a-half minutes.

'It has been an extremely difficult situation,' Mr Downer said on Monday.

Of course, the truth is, it's all very easy to take a huge, benevolent corporation like Coca-Cola-Amatil to task.

I know at Ryde they are proud of their liberal attitudes and they won't come at the imposition of a shorts-only-with-long-socks rule during competition matches.

We are not at war with Iran.

I know at Ryde they are proud of their liberal attitudes and they won't come at the imposition of a shorts-only-with-long-socks rule during competition matches.

There are two compelling propositions supporting this conclusion.

Among them - perhaps the most vital foreign policy question - for the West and for the people of Iraq - ou est Tintin?

'There's the breads as well, and I can assure you the out-of-touch PM doesn't know a sourdough olive loaf from a nine-seed hi-top.

This enviable position is in modern times rarely achieved and difficult to maintain.

Australia is nominally a liberal democracy of the Westminster tradition. But paradoxically it remains important to make the attempt - despite awareness that the attempt is doomed to failure.

But an idea that all perspectives should be equally represented in the media in the interest of balance does not discount any of these views.

Meanwhile, a kind of lip service is maintained to the facade of balance so essential to a democratic facade of long tradition.

The answer appears to lie in inaccessible fine print of the sedition bill, or perhaps in the fine print of a future amendment to it, as yet unimplemented but likely retrospective when enacted.

In the wake of this latest insensitive statement about birds, the Prime Minister was even more prompt.

in short there's very little to balance.

However much one might legally wish an unfortunate death upon these public figures, no mention is to be made of how this happy state of affairs might be achieved forthwith.

The monarchic tradition is one awkward flaw in the status of a legitimate, independent Australia.

Ultimately, though, they are serving the incumbents in helping to creating an illusion of ongoing democratic debate.

Some appeared to be more susceptible to his influence, and quickly succumbed.

In sports as in politics, the aim is to win, and we can let the Fairfax papers worry about 'morals'.

org or use this convenient email form

The student of history yet to have lived through a substantial period of it is at a natural disadvantage in approaching historical contemplation.

Foreign Minister Alexander Downer has spent the last week in crisis talks, attempting to overcome the Federal Government's lack of legal options.

While it might be supposed that the established institutions, the principle role of the public broadcaster is to reflect community sensibilities, and community opinion.

'It has been an extremely difficult situation,' Mr Downer said on Monday.

Ultimately, though, they are serving the incumbents in helping to creating an illusion of ongoing democratic debate.

Nor is it true to say there are no fora for less powerful voices to be heard.

The belief that one can briefly set aside one's axioms and bias in order to pen an objective factual account of some event or another is hopelessly naive.

It applies regardless of whether the walls are built of stone, of words, or of the technologies of electronic misinformation.

In the wake of this latest insensitive statement about birds, the Prime Minister was even more prompt.

But the truth is nobody is more interested in bringing the pleasant luxuries of the West to impoverished humans in disadvantaged corners of the planet than the goodly executives of Coke.

Beyond the acknowledged and unacknowledged filters that limit who is heard and how often, the idea of balance is rendered irrational by the refusal of media outlets to let all perspectives be heard.

'The good voters of Bennelong won't be taken in by Madame Blow-In,' he told a moderate, intelligent talk-back radio host.

But Opposition Leader Kevin Rudd's star recruit said there is more to upper North Shore politics than deciphering difficult cafe menus.

Iran has an embassy in Australia, an ambassador, and as Trad suggests, there is trade between the two nations.

Not only was the tubby minister's statement grossly inappropriate, profoundly patriarchal and like something from a previous century, it was by no means accurate.

But sedition laws, as mentioned, appear to be at the best of times among the tools and devices of a State on shaky ground, without a secure sense of itself, and prone to fits of wild paranoia.

He may, privately, fantasise endlessly about the Shadow Workplace Relations Mini ster.

It's protection , and the potential for its demise a subject of constant interest.

Fortresses in General are much more Harmful than Useful.

It applies regardless of whether the walls are built of stone, of words, or of the technologies of electronic misinformation.

Occasionally, if sufficiently loony, it may be that the Greens are allowed a ten-second spot towards the back of the story.

The last thing the people of Longueville need is to become another Balmoral.

But sedition laws, as mentioned, appear to be at the best of times among the tools and devices of a State on shaky ground, without a secure sense of itself, and prone to fits of wild paranoia.

And the dangerous political decision might at the same time put the people on their guard.

But in any case, whether the critical point of consolidation is reached and passed consciously or unconsciously - by accident or design - the outcome is the same.

Jamelot Sample a selection from the populist and libertarian new CD Jamelot, assorted flamencish and djangoesque with salubrious bottoms and jazzy strains.

'There's the breads as well, and I can assure you the out-of-touch PM doesn't know a sourdough olive loaf from a nine-seed hi-top.

Balance is presented as another worthy aspiration for those preparing the events of the day for the consumption of the citizenry.

Common sense and decency might dictate that these extremists be suppressed.

Foreign Minister Alexander Downer has spent the last week in crisis talks, attempting to overcome the Federal Government's lack of legal options.

The first is that, to paraphrase Orwell, looking from Opposition to Government, to lobbyist, we can scarcely tell any more which is which.

Balance is presented as another worthy aspiration for those preparing the events of the day for the consumption of the citizenry.

It applies regardless of whether the walls are built of stone, of words, or of the technologies of electronic misinformation.

The belief that one can briefly set aside one's axioms and bias in order to pen an objective factual account of some event or another is hopelessly naive.

Mr Howard thought about the question, and firmly shook his head.

Instead, the Government is asked to respond to the Opposition's comment, and both the Opposition and the Government said Israel had a right to defend its territory against Hezbollah.

'Howard is sweating, no question,' opined Parliament cafe attendant Donna Worrall.

Hockey has chubby cheeks and a fatuous grin, while Gillard is generally serious and somewhat severe.

The State has been permeable at certain times to certain political agendas which have resulted in genuinely democratic reforms.

The English wars of distant centuries between citizens and monarchs that established the powers and limits of high office still well understood in Britain have no context here.

It would have been hell for the players to even begin to consider such sophisticated metaphysical issues.

We, the public, can only guess at this congruent extension, apparently known to cognoscenti among the Federal Police.

It would have been hell for the players to even begin to consider such sophisticated metaphysical issues.

Or of the lunatic Government of the most powerful foreign country in the world.

In the first case they are unnecessary and in the second case harmful.

But a cosy complacency prevents the development of any fledgling concern for the future of the Australian nation into a serious articulation in public debate of what may lie ahead.

There are two compelling propositions supporting this conclusion.

Some appeared to be more susceptible to his influence, and quickly succumbed.

Objectivity is an impossible aspiration for the newshound.

Balance is presented as another worthy aspiration for those preparing the events of the day for the consumption of the citizenry.

But Opposition Leader Kevin Rudd's star recruit said there is more to upper North Shore politics than deciphering difficult cafe menus.

Fortresses in General are much more Harmful than Useful.

This change, though, is significant, in large part because the standing committees have allowed for the genuine critique of Government legislation and the effects of policy.

I know at Ryde they are proud of their liberal attitudes and they won't come at the imposition of a shorts-only-with-long-socks rule during competition matches.

Hockey has chubby cheeks and a fatuous grin, while Gillard is generally serious and somewhat severe.

And one of the things that makes rulers believe in force is the fact that they have fortresses to fall back on.

The State has been permeable at certain times to certain political agendas which have resulted in genuinely democratic reforms.

But in any case, whether the critical point of consolidation is reached and passed consciously or unconsciously - by accident or design - the outcome is the same.

' But Federal Health Minister and Howard confidante Tony Abbott denies there are ructions in Government circles.

As Cricket Australia pointed out, they would have been fined two million dollars if they pulled out, so it really was an incredibly difficult situation for them

In sports as in politics, the aim is to win, and we can let the Fairfax papers worry about 'morals'.

This change, though, is significant, in large part because the standing committees have allowed for the genuine critique of Government legislation and the effects of policy.

But Opposition Leader Kevin Rudd's star recruit said there is more to upper North Shore politics than deciphering difficult cafe menus.

'There's the breads as well, and I can assure you the out-of-touch PM doesn't know a sourdough olive loaf from a nine-seed hi-top.

Objectivity is an impossible aspiration for the newshound.

The content of this Internet material can hardly be less 'factual' than the printed and television material that is its stylistic precursor.

For example, those who believe stridently in the legitimisation of polygamy are rarely given a platform for their political position.

Unfortunately the Opposition steadfastly fails to recognise that it is taking up space that otherwise might have been taken by people asking hang on, aren't we being farmed here?

And it dispenses with a disingenuous pretence to an objective position.

Beyond the acknowledged and unacknowledged filters that limit who is heard and how often, the idea of balance is rendered irrational by the refusal of media outlets to let all perspectives be heard.

Perhaps in the circles he moves Gillard is considered less a powerful politician and more a scrumptious bit.

Keysar Trad, a spokesman for the mufti, has already pointed out that Australia has relations with Iran.

Another possible problem with balance is that it's not an easy task to put all points of view equally.

But the presentation of all points of view is more easily said than done, and is not necessarily advisable.

But there is little doubt that Hockey is by far the cuter and cuddlier of the two.

It applies regardless of whether the walls are built of stone, of words, or of the technologies of electronic misinformation.

Hockey is rotund, while Gillard is gaunt and towering.

And one of the things that makes rulers believe in force is the fact that they have fortresses to fall back on.

But paradoxically it remains important to make the attempt - despite awareness that the attempt is doomed to failure.

Ultimately, though, they are serving the incumbents in helping to creating an illusion of ongoing democratic debate.

'But Federal Health Minister and Howard confidante Tony Abbott denies there are ructions in Government circles.

'Howard is sweating, no question,' opined Parliament cafe attendant Donna Worrall.

But the attempts of the anti-nuclear lobby to spin a nightmarish tale from the incident have proved fruitless, with the nuclear accident in actuality nothing more than a red herring.

And his assertion that Gillard is prettier than he is may be refuted by many of those familiar with the appearance and demeanour of the two.

Or 'The Making of Statements Inimicable To Current Government Policy'.

It might be a stretch to describe either the Minister or his Shadow as 'pretty'.

Another possible problem with balance is that it's not an easy task to put all points of view equally.

Joe Hockey may personally have a penchant, a crush, a 'thing' for Julia.

Of course, the truth is, it's all very easy to take a huge, benevolent corporation like Coca-Cola-Amatil to task.

But there is little doubt that Hockey is by far the cuter and cuddlier of the two.

Not only was the tubby minister's statement grossly inappropriate, profoundly patriarchal and like something from a previous century, it was by no means accurate.

And his assertion that Gillard is prettier than he is may be refuted by many of those familiar with the appearance and demeanour of the two.

Balance is presented as another worthy aspiration for those preparing the events of the day for the consumption of the citizenry.

'The good voters of Bennelong won't be taken in by Madame Blow-In,' he told a moderate, intelligent talk-back radio host.

The student of history yet to have lived through a substantial period of it is at a natural disadvantage in approaching historical contemplation.

Sometimes a Business Council luminary or chief executive officer or irate union brain will be given voice.

It's protection, and the potential for its demise a subject of constant interest.

Born without passionate conflict, the Australian nation has foundations that are tenuous at best, even on the basis of its problematic sovereignty.

org or use this convenient email form

Joe Hockey may personally have a penchant, a crush, a 'thing' for Julia.

But the truth is nobody is more interested in bringing the pleasant luxuries of the West to impoverished humans in disadvantaged corners of the planet than the goodly executives of Coke.

However much one might legally wish an unfortunate death upon these public figures, no mention is to be made of how this happy state of affairs might be achieved forthwith.

Another possible problem with balance is that it's not an easy task to put all points of view equally.

Gillard has short-cropped sensible low maintenance ginger hair, while Hockey sports a fluffy black crop.

Keysar Trad, a spokesman for the mufti, has already pointed out that Australia has relations with Iran.

Fortunately it's not difficult, with an Internet connexion, to avoid the kind of balance preferred nowadays on the public and commercial airwaves and in the print media of Australia.

The English wars of distant centuries between citizens and monarchs that establi shed the powers and limits of high office still well understood in Britain have no context here.

'There's the breads as well, and I can assure you the out-of-touch PM doesn't know a sourdough olive loaf from a nine-seed hi-top.

Hockey has chubby cheeks and a fatuous grin, while Gillard is generally serious and somewhat severe.

This is a country where I have trained all citizens to put aside all thoughts of decency in the pursuit of low interest rates and keeping dark-skinned foreigners out.

'The impasse was broken yesterday by a coincidence of events that permitted authorities on both sides of the Indian Ocean to seek a solution with renewed impetus.

In which case, how can it be said to be seditious to call for support for Iran within Australia?

For example, those who believe stridently in the legitimisation of polygamy are rarely given a platform for their political position.

We, the public, can only guess at this congruent extension, apparently known to cognoscenti among the Federal Police.

It applies regardless of whether the walls are built of stone, of words, or of the technologies of electronic misinformation.

This is a country where I have trained all citizens to put aside all thoughts of decency in the pursuit of low interest rates and keeping dark-skinned foreigners out.

Iran has an embassy in Australia, an ambassador, and as Trad suggests, there is trade between the two nations.

Keysar Trad, a spokesman for the mufti, has already pointed out that Australia has relations with Iran.

In which case, how can it be said to be seditious to call for support for Iran within Australia?

Balance is presented as another worthy aspiration for those preparing the events of the day for the consumption of the citizenry.

The content of this Internet material can hardly be less 'factual' than the printed and television material that is its stylistic precursor.

And one of the things that makes rulers believe in force is the fact that they have fortresses to fall back on.

But a cosy complacency prevents the development of any fledgling concern for the future of the Australian nation into a serious articulation in public debate of what may lie ahead.

The policy of Terra Nullius and the theft of a continent, another issue still unresolved, is a flaw far more terrible.

The monarchic tradition is one awkward flaw in the status of a legitimate, independent Australia.

Within an hour prime ministerial advisors called another press conference in order that he might retract his earlier statement, which had in the meantime become a hot issue for talkback

Keysar Trad, a spokesman for the mufti, has already pointed out that Australia has relations with Iran.

Hockey is rotund, while Gillard is gaunt and towering.

Balance is presented as another worthy aspiration for those preparing the events of the day for the consumption of the citizenry.